- Does your child have difficulty organizing his work, turning things in, writing down assignments?
- Do you find yourself up late at night helping your child with work that she had three weeks to do but waited until the night before to start?
- Does your child need you to sit next to them to start their homework and to stay on task?
- Do you send your child off to school with a sweat shirt that you never see again?
- Is it hard for you to read your child's handwriting but they draw beautifully?
- Do you find you say the same things over and over again?

Come and learn about wiring differences, what memory is all about, why your child has difficulty planning & time managing and how to help. Learn how to help your creative thinker who is struggling in school. And, once for all, find the answerer to how much help is too much help.
